

I am appalled by Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force its stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. This is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge. It is therefore obligated by law to serve the public interest. When large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less democracy. The public good is sacrificed for the corporate profit.

Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
